Celebration

Rotary International Anniversary

PE Fran Becque introduced a vintage video (available on YouTube) to highlight instrumental and interesting figures from the earliest days of Rotary: "Boys of 1905." The black-and-white film portrayed the start of "Rotary One," the role of Paul Harris, and contributions of other members of the original club.

The premise of the film/video is a visit by New York Rotarian "Chic" Sale to Chicago and his desire to meet the founding Rotarians and other members of the inaugural club. Sale was a major figure in vaudeville, then silent films of the day. He was an ancestor of the later comedian, Soupy Sales.

Fran also reported that Harris' home still exists in the Beverly Hills section of the Ridge district of south Chicago, but needs restoration. The estimated cost of such renovation is $6 million. The home is near Harris' burial site.
